From a Sermon by St. Fulgentius, the Bishop:
(Sermo 3 de S. Stephano circa initium)

Yesterday we were celebrating the Birth in time of our eternal King. Today we celebrate the triumphant suffering of one of his soldiers. Yesterday our king, clothed in the robe of our flesh, was pleased to come forth from his royal palace of the Virgin's womb to visit the world. Today his soldier, laying aside the tabernacle of the body, entereth in triumph into the palace of heaven. The One, preserving unchanged that majesty of the Godhead which he had before the world was, girded himself with the lowliness of our flesh in the form of a servant, and entered into the battlefield of this world. The other, putting off the corruptible garment of our flesh, entered into the heavenly mansions, there to reign forever. The One, cometh down and is veiled in the flesh of his human birth. The other goeth up, and is robed with a glory which is red with the blood of his temporal death.... The One cometh down amid the jubilation of Angels. The other goeth up amid the stoning... Yesterday the holy Angels rejoiced in the song: Glory to God in the highest. Today they rejoice in the welcome whereby they do receive Stephen into their company. Yesterday the Lord came forth from the Virgin's womb. Today his soldier is delivered from the prison of the body. Yesterday Christ was for our sakes wrapped in swaddling bands. Today he girdeth Stephen with a robe of immortality. Yesterday the new-born Christ lay in a narrow manger. Today Stephen entereth victorious into the boundless heavens, The Lord came down, one and alone, that he might raise many up. Our King descended into our low estate so that he might set his soldiers, such as Stephen, in high places.
